Task 3: Clause IV

In 1918 the Labour Party formed its constitution (Rule Book). A lot of it was the work of Sidney Webb. Read the original Clause IV (source 1) and then compare it to the reformed Clause IV (source 2) that was adopted under Tony Blair's leadership in 1995.

Source 1: The old Clause IV (1918)

The Labour party's object is...to secure for the workers by hand or by brain the full fruits of their industry and the most equitable distribution thereof that may be possible upon the basis of the common ownership of the means of production, distribution and exchange, and the best obtainable system of popular administration and control of each industry of service.

Source 2: The new Clause IV (1995)

The Labour party works for:

- A dynamic economy, serving the public interest, in which the enterprise of the market and the rigour of competition are joined with the forces of partnership and cooperation to produce the wealth the nation needs and the opportunity for all to work and prosper, with a thriving private sector and high quality public services, where those undertakings essential to the common good are either owned by the public or accountable to them;
- A just society, which judges its strength by the condition of the weak as much as the strong, provides security against fear, and justice at work; which nurtures families, promotes equality of opportunity and delivers people from the tyranny of poverty, prejudice and abuse of power;
- An open democracy, in which government is held to account by the people; decisions are taken as far as practicable by the communities they affect; and where fundamental human rights are guaranteed;
- A healthy environment, which we protect, enhance and hold in trust for future generations.
